In Brief

TO DRAW UP BY-LAWS. The five-man board of the recently formed Warren County Oil and Gas Producers and Mineral Rights Association will meet at 7:30 tonight in the office of the organization's secretary, Miss Montana Knupp, to draft association by-laws.

The group formed after a proposal made by Glade Township supervisors which would place drilling restrictions on producers. Action on the part of the supervisors was taken on complaints by citizens in Glade Township who own property but have no say over the drilling rights.

The WCOGPMRA was organized with the purpose of representing its membership in any future developments. It has also expressed disfavor toward a state ruling which enables county supervisors to set up certain laws.

Other officers of the group are LaMonte Culbertson, Warren, president; and Dr. C. E. Dutter, Kane, vice president.

DEATH BY POISON RULED OUT. The coroner's and sheriff's offices will rule that Mrs. Vivian Erickson died on November 20th of natural causes, rather than from strychnine poisoning. The decision was reached after a laboratory test was made to confirm the cause of death.

The woman had told her husband, Rudolph, just before her death at their home the night of the 20th, that she had taken poison.

The lab tests proved contrary and it since has been learned that she had had a heart condition.

The Erickson home is at Allegheny Spring in Brokenstraw twp.

DETAILS OF MISHAP. Wednesday morning at 8 a. m. a car operated by Eva Brown, of Sheffield, hit an icy spot in the road, and when she applied the brakes, the car spun around and struck the guard rails on the right hand side of the road. The accident which occurred about two miles east of Warren, also involved two other vehicles driven by Thomas Crooks, of Clarendon, and Howard Rumberger, also of Clarendon.

The two drivers could not stop on the slippery pavement and they both hit the Brown machine causing an estimated total damage of $1400. No one was injured in the collision.

CRIMINAL CASES to be disposed of in Warren County Court today involve George Blimish, charge of larceny; John Mike Dohollow, burglary; James Belmont Johnson, larceny; Ronald L. Kennedy, forgery; John E. Larson, drunken driving; Jack McDonald, drunken driving; William Ernest Show, burglary; Peter Fedirko, Jr., failure to stop at the scene of an accident.

TIDIOUTE AREA CHAMBER of Commerce members will hear Bob Parlman, public relations director for the Pennsylvania Game Commission, when they meet Tuesday evening, December 15, in the Tidioute V.F.W. Post rooms. The speaker works out of the Franklin district office.

RETIRED. John H. King, Starbrick, retired from the Pennsylvania Railroad this week after having served as a railroad engineer for the past 47 years. King joined the PRR in 1909 in a fireman's capacity and operated in Oil City until 1925 when he came to Warren. Earlier this year he was given duty in the Struthers Wells yards where he has worked until announcing his retirement.

THE CHRISTMAS MAIL RUSH has reached its peak locally and from the post office comes word that "you can still avoid disappointing your friends and loved ones on Christmas Day if you'll get your gifts and cards into the mails by tomorrow".

From now on, late mailers should use airmail for their Christmas cards or gifts going to distant places. There is still time for local deliveries, but all Christmas cards should be sent by first-class mail.

Be sure that all your cards are addressed correctly and that they carry return addresses, thus insuring forwarding service or return to you if any of them are undeliverable.

Post Office windows will remain open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. this week and next week they will also be open evenings from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m. The Drive-in Annex is open only from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. this week but next week, the 14th through the 19th, it will be open 9:00 a.m. to noon and 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. The above hours include Saturdays.

It's best to make your post office trips before 10:00 a.m. or between 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. to avoid the noon hour rush.

ATTENTION SCOUTERS. Boy Scouts of the Warren area who are planning to attend the Fifth National Jamboree at Colorado Springs next July are urged to register and send in their initial $25 reservation fee as soon as possible.

Reservations at the Jamboree headquarters are filling up fast, which means they may be closed momentarily.

The cost of the trip totals $250. This includes round-trip train fare, tours, Jamboree fees, troop and patrol, equipment, insurance, leadership. The trip will be made over the Erie Railroad from Jamestown to Chicago in air-conditioned coaches and then over the Burlington lines to Colorado Springs. Tours are also planned in both Chicago and Denver.

FIRE CALLS...

Wednesday morning at 9:29 a. m. firemen were called to the Don E. McComas home at 12 Central ave. where the motor on a furnace blower had caused some smoke in the house. The firemen alleviated the situation by turning off the furnace.

"WINTER WONDERLAND" . . . the annual Warren High Student Council's Sno-Ball scheduled for tomorrow (Saturday) will be a dress-up dance in the high school gym between 8:30 and 11:30 when Richard Arthur's Quintet will supply the music.

A KIDDIE YEAR

I had my two children watch "Oliver Twist," the DuPont show Friday night, their first exposure to the Dickens classic. "How come everyone's so cruel?" asked my daughter, after poor little Oliver took an awful drubbing after asking for seconds. I was a little surprised at this reaction. Between the mayhem on television and the horror comics I thought the kids were well inured to cruelty.

But nineteenth century cruelty was a different matter. Firstly, it was directed against children and children aren't used to this. Secondly it was real -- as opposed to the sort of play cruelty which leaves the children so unmoved on TV. "Sad story" was another comment that escaped them as Oliver Twist was torn from the loving Brownlows and put back into the hands of the villainous Fagin. Altogether, though, I don't think the kids were as moved or as interested in "Oliver Twist" as I was at their age.

Something fell out of the story -- some of the sweep and power of nineteenth century England -- some of the terror and wonder of it. It was a splendid production with some mighty fine actors and the sights, and sounds and smells of nineteenth century London came across superbly. But the story was a little foreshortened, Eric Portman was an impressive Fagin, physically, but I had trouble understanding him -- a common complaint against Portman who simply won't take it seriously. Robert Morley had great majesty and munity all of his life. He was a World War II veteran.

Mr. Larson had been employed by the Struthers Wells Corp. in Warren.

Survivors are his mother, Mrs. Alma B. Larson; two sisters, Edith of Ludlow, and Mrs. Maynard Berg of Warren; three brothers, Raymond A. of Milwaukee, Wis., Victor E. of Princeton, N.J., and Norman W. of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Services in his memory will be held in Sheffield at 2 p.m. Saturday. The Rev. Carl Eliason of Moriah Lutheran Church will officiate and burial will be in Gibbs Hill Cemetery in Ludlow.

RUTH VINCENT JOHNSTON, Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Ruth Vincent Johnston, a sister of Mrs. Margaret Thompson of Warren. She died Tuesday after an illness of two years.

Besides her sister, she is survived by her husband, Harvey W. Johnston of Tionesta.

EARL YORK, 81, of R. D. 2, Sugar Grove, died in Warren General Hospital Wednesday afternoon after a short illness. Born in Youngsville on May 21, 1878, he was a retired farmer and had been a life-long resident of the area.

Surviving are his wife, Ethel Walters York; five daughters, Mrs. Mary Kneer of Jamestown, N.Y., Mrs. May Irwin, Mrs. Vivian Mead, Mrs. Florence Lawson and Mrs. Arlene Williams all of Sugar Grove; three sons, Ralph and Phillip of Jamestown, N.Y., and Milton of Sugar Grove. Also, 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

humanity as Mr. Brownlow (though he blew sky high at one point). As Oliver, young Frederick Clark was a little tentative, a little pallid. Perhaps that was the trouble.

The kids just didn't seem to care enough about the people. They were much more impressed a week earlier with NBC's "Miracle on Thirty-Fourth Street," another live production, with Ed Wynn playing a real Santa Claus who takes the place of a department store Santa Claus. Again it was a famous movie which I didn't see. (Vance Packard says it is now a status symbol to turn the TV set off altogether or to sell it. But back when I was a boy it was a symbol of intellectual status to NOT attend movies. Now I am seeing on television all the movies I deliberately missed in the '30s and '40s. Now it's a symbol of status to GO to movies. In fact, in France, Ken Tynan reported in "The New Yorker," movies are THE thing for the younger intellectuals; none of whom goes to the theater."

Anyhow, when Peter Lind Hayes won an acquittal for old Santa, the kids cheered and so did I. It was a sentimental bit of whimsy and Mr. Wynn, even though he blew his lines a couple of times, was very fetching as were Mr. Hayes and Miss Healy and an adorable little girl Susan Gordon. It was beautifully directed, by William Corrigan, too.

One of the big hits -- one of the few -- of this TV season is CBS's "Dennis the Menace," a film version of the comic strip. The kids eat it up -- but I'm not sure I do. Dennis is a small boy (played by Jay North, a snub-nosed blond moppet who'll remind you older children of Jackie Cooper), who is incessantly trying to help out. In helping out, the swimming pool somehow accidentally gets dug in the wrong back yard. Or in trying to help his father out of imaginary financial difficulties he shatters friendships and get the whole community in an uproar. It's comedy by inadvertence, comedy by misunderstanding. Well, heaven knows there's nothing the matter with that. Misunderstanding peopled radio with plots for situation comedies for years.

But I guess I just outgrew it. Anyhow, Dennis seems awfully contrived, awfully fixed. Also, Dennis is much too well brushed to be quite real. They ought to muss his hair if I'm to believe it. Still the kids just adore it and it's wholesome enough entertainment for them.

I thought Jimmy Durante and Jane Powell and Ray Bolger had an awfully nice show the other night, full of show business schmaltz and fun and laughter. They, too, had a small boy, Eddie Hodges, involved. It's getting to be almost impossible to put on a show without 'em.

POPULATION CONTROL

The heart of the matter, of course, is food. We may be able to move them onto space ships, man-made islands, oceanic subterranean tenelements, arctic developments, and even planets, but they still will have to eat. That is the major nub to the problem of the human explosion so many are using for copy these days. Copy and politics.

It is a paradox that as man increases his knowledge he finds himself about to be blown into non-existence. One method is atomic, and quick. The other is doing what comes naturally and lasts longer. We like that one.

We think it unfortunate that the population issue has been allowed to evolve into a religious argument. Such a development can do mankind much more harm than good.

Our foreign aid is not a missionary program. We offer the money and the knowledge to be used for improvements in health and economics. We make it available but we leave them free to make their own moral decisions.

If we were to apply the collective restrictions of all religious groups as a measure of each appropriation, very few dollars would be sent abroad to help the underprivileged. Certainly no arms would be provided. The consumption of some kinds of food would be so disapproved that we would withhold funds intended for their cultivation.

ANY GOOD RELIGION

But a truly good religion does not force its dogmas on those it is attempting to help. The fact is we could have an aid program handled by any of the really great religious groups and it would be practical. We are convinced that the teachings of the founders if completely practiced would solve most of our problems. It can be argued that only he of little faith is fearful that abiding by such teachings will not solve our problems, population and otherwise. The question then arises, what did they teach, and for our purposes we can consider a few close parallels that apply to the current differences.

If man were to lay aside his weapons and forget the art of killing, brilliant minds and billions of dollars would be turned to other problems, such as the improvement of our good health and the provision of food for our multiplying stomachs.

If we were to love our neighbors and do unto them as we would have them do unto us, there would be no hungry people, no backward people, no underprivileged.

The teachings in every case were simply given. But they have been very much complicated by successors to the early associates and they have not been practiced.

They will be practiced eventually, or man will not be around to worry about over-population. Evolution will prove the commandments right, and man will benefit accordingly if he does not let time run out before he sees the truth.

IF WE MAKE IT

Assuming that we make it and that the elimination of one type of explosive destroyer confronts us with another, how, then, do we eat? The answer may be comparatively simple. If this were our only problem life might become a bore.

There will come a day when man will look back at our current eating habits and think of us as ignorant gluttons. He will see us in the same light as we see those of a few centuries back when life expectancy was not even fifty, and incorrect diet was a major cause of short years.

We have food on our tables today the thought of which will nauseate our descendants. Much of it even may be outlawed.

Their eating will be greatly simplified, though their tastes may be even finer than ours. They will have basic food which will make meals an easy accomplishment, but they will have flavors that will be exotic improvements on our natural productions.

An example of what can be done along this line is the algae. This water product that doubles its number every day is rich in protein and is loaded with chlorophyll. It uses light efficiently to speed its growth and enrich itself.

Algae is a nutritional bonanza, but it is not tasty. In fact it has no taste at all, and who wants to eat a mouthful of nothing? Not even the stomach that goes with the brain of 2000 A. D. can relish the thought.

But even our poor 1959 celebrations have come up with some answers to this one. We need light food such as this for our space flights. To make men eat it we are experimenting with flavors and already they have baked algae cookies.

The next step will be to treat the algae so that it tastes like steak, fish, coffee, or tea. This suggests the food pitch of tomorrow. They will not sell varieties of food. They will sell flavor for the algae which you scoop from the family pool. And the guy with the ninety-seven varieties, all of which are "thinking men's flavors" with that rich, old-fashioned goodness like grandmother used to make, will harvest the millions.

We are puzzled about at least one aspect. If they really clean up the advertising business who will give the testimonial concerning what grandmother used to make? If among us there are any who can manage to stay around that long they will have something honest that is better than payola.

We have our algae, the flavors are coming, and we are going to eat. So, let's explode . . . the slow way, that is.

Democrats Have Campaign Puzzles

by Doris Fleenor

NEW YORK. -- Democrats were privately warned here by party leaders that they cannot expect the Communists to bail them out of the political dilemma posed for them in 1960 by the Eisenhower peace offensive. Instead, the thinking of major party spokesmen is that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev prefers the Republican emphasis on budget-balancing to Democratic demands for better defense and increased efforts to catch up in space. They reason, therefore, that Khrushchev will not create fresh crises or take harsh and repressive measures in the satellite countries which might discredit "the spirit of Camp David."

Nobody believes or would charge that President Eisenhower is not sincerely working for peace. It is conceded that he is doing his duty as he sees it, even by those most skeptical about the value of his present and contemplated travels. In fact, the opinion which prevailed easily in the Democratic Advisory Council was that negotiations of all kinds with the Russians, particularly in disarmament matters, must continue.

But the party strategists are bitterly aware that the "yes, but" position is not the strongest possible political stance to hold in a hard-fought campaign. Some ask if they can win such a campaign without a personal villain and are frankly doubtful that they can.

They expect the Eisenhower peace offensive to spread over all the pre-convention period and even blanket their nominating convention. Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota gave an interview to this effect. He is also among the Kremlin visitors to whom Khrushchev complained that the greater military expenditures demanded by Democrats would mean a tighter financial straitjacket for Khrushchev instead of that better life he has promised the Russian people.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Adlai Stevenson and former Gov. Averell Harriman of New York are other Russian travelers and Khrushchev interviewees who feel the tubby, cold-eyed Premier puts political acuteness of a high order at the service of communism. They do not expect the slightest overt interference from him with the 1960 campaign but are sure he is deeply sensitive to its potential for him.

It should not surprise anybody that the leading spokesman for the "utter damnation" strategy for meeting the peace offensive dilemma should be former Secretary of State Dean Acheson. It was tried out on him with considerable success by many Republicans, including the leading contender for their 1960 nomination, Vice-President Richard Nixon.

Most Americans like to forget those excesses, but naturally the victim cannot. He was beaten back after a hard fight in the week-end deliberations here, however.

Instead, the mood that seems to be emerging is something like this: Democrats are the majority party, armed and led by 36 Governors and big Congressional majorities. Their primary task must be to avoid disharmony and quarrels, uniting rather on any one of their candidates after all have had a fair shot at the nomination.

A note of unity comes hard to Democrats, no matter how strongly self-interest appears to dictate it. They have been described as a loose confederation of warring tribes and with even more penetrating ridicule. Nor is it probable that the delegates at Los Angeles are going to let a handful of old pros tell them what to do. But here at least no attempts are being made to soft-pedal the difficulties they have and the need to get smart about meeting them.

Leaky Faucets A Secret Weapon

by Inez Robb

My attention has been called to a splendid article by Stewart Alsop in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, in which Mr. Alsop sounds a ringing call for men to cease being mice and become monsters.

Well, not exactly monsters, either. Mr. Alsop's clarion cry is for men once more to become masters and masterly when faced with the outrageous treatment that so often passes for public service today in hotels, restaurants, buses, trains, stores -- any place, in fact, where the general public must treat with and is at the mercy of representatives of that nebulous, aloof, hidden power known only (as in a Kafka novel) as The Management.

Mr. Alsop calls for a public uprising, in righteous wrath, against what is known, for lack of a better term, as "being pushed around" by head waiters, captains and bellboys, by hotel clerks, bus drivers, floor walkers, salesmen, ad infinitum.

That is something that has needed saying for a long time, and a subject upon which I grow quasi-elocuent from time to time. Mr. Alsop even outlines a procedure by which one blows his top and becomes such a towering monument of indignation that even hotel clerks are cowed. It involves voluntary choking until the "indignee" grows magenta in hue, popped in eye and terrifying in voice and word.

Now this is just dandy, and I applaud Mr. Alsop for striking this forcible blow for liberty in a commercial world in which the going motto is: "The Customer Is ALWAYS Wrong" -- a world in which the customer is glad if the other fellow is merely indifferent.

Alas, what Mr. Alsop has described, fine as it is, is For Men Only.

When a man, goaded beyond endurance by sloppy, insolent and indifferent service, finally beats his breast and protests, people applaud him admiringly because "he is standing up for his rights in true American fashion."

But if a woman, for just cause, does likewise everyone is frightfully embarrassed because "she is making a SCENE!" And the unforgivable sin in a woman is not infidelity or gossip or biting her nails, but making a scene. Perish forbid that a member of my sex so far forget herself as to make a scene even though the hotel clerk insults her, the insolent waiter pours soup down her décolletage and the bus driver is rude beyond compare.

Ladies must not lift their voices (one to a customer), or grow purple of countenance, jump up and down or appear in the throes of a seizure, as Mr. Alsop suggests. This is just dandy for the boys, and more power to them. Ladies must be ladies, if it kills them, and sometimes it almost does. I've chewed my tongue so often it is ravelled.

But, thank God, my sex is not helpless in the face of intolerable provocation. We have a weapon that I beg my sisters to use more often than they do: tears. I used to HATE myself for doing it, as I am not a weeping woman. But when I discovered in my salad days that only men could make scenes, I hunted around for a womanly substitute. It seemed terribly unfair that only men could chew the rug in public.

However, about that time, I discovered that in extremis tears will reduce the bully on the other side to a frightened pulp. Dirty trick? Nonsense! No more so than Mr. Alsop's simulated fit. I keep an extra handkerchief in my pocket just for occasions when so-called public servants become so impossible there is nothing to do but CRY.

The woman who makes a scene gets no place; but the world belongs to us leaky faucets.

Turkey Is In The Middle

by
Marquis Childs

KARACHI. -- Nowhere within the area of the NATO alliance has President Eisenhower's approach to Premier Khrushchev had such a shattering effect as in Turkey. Being anti-Communist there is not merely a policy. It is a way of life, a reason for being, a justification for all that is done and left undone.

From the safe vantage of Western Europe one can talk about reasonable choices. Is it to be a settlement -- peaceful coexistence -- with the Soviet Union or not?

But for the Turks the old enmity is written in the deep scars of the past. They sit on coveted ground, at the gateway to the Mediterranean, the warm water port that the Russians have long sought. The blood feuds are written in centuries of conflict between East and West. For Turkey the military imperative has another motivation. This is a very poor country. Industrialization has been slow. The cost of "progress" in Western terms has been paid for in recent years with an inflation that has brought the country close to disaster.

So, therefore, keeping up to 20 divisions of men in uniform, fed and clothed, at an age when they might otherwise be looking for jobs has been a small blessing to the economy. No small share of the cost of arming and sustaining this force has come through NATO by way of the United States.

As they proved again and again in Korea, the Turks are a tough fighting force, endowed with qualities of endurance and courage not too common in the world today. But in an alliance based increasingly on missiles and the nuclear deterrent the value of such a force is seriously in question.

It is a tragic irony that at this moment of history, coinciding with President Eisenhower's visit, the Turks find that what they have to offer is less and less in demand. Along with the exchange of visits with Khrushchev, which came as a stunning shock, they sense that a new policy of curtailment and economy in Washington means no good for the kind of help they need to keep their force in being. Prime Minister Adnan Menderes has long wanted an opportunity to express his doubts and uncertainties on the score of Turkey's future to an American with authority and responsibility, and that is why Eisenhower's visit was so welcome.

But what Menderes is reported to be saying in strictest privacy is not likely to harmonize with the theme of peace and good will that the President is carrying to all the countries he visits on his 19-day tour. No concessions, stand fast -- these are the Turkish slogans. They are deeply suspicious of any move that seems to qualify this position. They are taking considerable risks -- agreeing to American missile bases on Turkish soil -- and they want to be assured that these risks are not in vain. They know that Russian memories are long and they would like to believe that the West has similar capacity to hold in mind all that has gone before and what it means for the security of the diverse powers making up the alliance.

The problem in Turkey is not, as it is in Italy, political. The Eisenhower-Khrushchev rapport has tended to give the Italian Communist party a status that it had largely lost after Khrushchev's expose of the Stalin era and the bitter tragedy of Hungary. At the same time the West failed to help underwrite the possibility of detaching Pietro Nenni and his left-wing socialists from the Communists, with the result that communism may appear before too long as the only opposition to the extreme right of the Christian Democratic coalition.

The Turks have suppressed not only the Communists but virtually all political opposition by the most rugged means. This has had its advantages in a country with a long border with the Soviet Union where subversion and infiltration are a constant threat.

But it has at the same time left a sense of sterility. The great upward surge initiated by Mustafa Kemal Ataturk 40 years ago brought Turkey out of feudalism and into the 20th Century. But it has long since come to a halt, and the Turks are finding it extremely difficult to move forward.

For a time, perhaps, the Turks can stay where they are -- still a powerful breakwater in the nuclear age against Soviet imperialism. They cannot forever sustain such a betwixt-and-between role. As the West grows less fearful, as peace breaks out -- if it is to break out -- they must move all the way into the world of the last half of the 20th Century.

BETTER COLOR TV
COLOR TELEVISION moved a step ahead this fall with the development of a tube which makes it possible to televise in a light that is almost the same as that used for black and white. This offers many possibilities, ranging from the addition of night-time events, such as baseball, political conventions, and many others, to the savings made in power for studio work. Anything that will reduce the cost of color television makes it more interesting to the sponsor and widens the scope of its use.

This tube was developed by General Electric at the request of Crosley. It already is being sold to stations and costs $2500, about double the price of other color tubes, but it lasts twice as long and will earn more keep with the flexibility it brings to television.

WRONG IMPRESSION
Many people who have colored telephones in their homes are under the impression that they own them. They will give you quite an argument on that point.

What they have paid, or what the "giver" has paid, is the extra charge for color. If you want to prove our point, don't pay your bill. The telephone, colored or not, will be taken out.

ADDITIONAL SAVINGS
The county commissioners are making many proposals to reduce costs. They have obtained bond bids that have been far lower than those usually paid. Most of the officeholders are taking advantage of these offers and are bonding themselves with the low bidders.

In the bond savings alone, $2,000 were lopped off expenses. If this had been practiced down through the years the figure would be quite fat.

The commissioners now are going to ask for bids on all printing, which amounts to about $5,000 a year. Formerly this has been distributed among the printers at the discretion of the officeholder involved and the commissioners have paid the bill.

Which means that the taxpayer has been paying for the cost of political favors and friendship. Few businesses are run this way and none of your officeholders would run theirs in that manner if the money were coming out of their own pockets.

We have one more suggestion, and it is not a new one. We have been suggesting it for many years.

One of the major expenses of government is legal printing. This also should be given to the papers on bids. In some areas the papers work closely together and stand pat on a fixed price. The legals then are passed around.

But it is quite obvious that there is competition in Warren county. Why not let the papers compete for the legals? The commissioners have done this to some extent, but not one hundred per cent.

SPECIAL FEELING
All of us enjoy the pleasure which is ours when we make someone happy on an appropriate occasion. These special times range from Christmas through birthdays, graduation, the joy of the first toy, and other moments we cherish and never forget.

There are some young people who often miss much of this. Most tragic are the boys and girls who may not have families or perhaps live in foster homes. All of us would like to help these, but of course we lack the necessary contacts.

There is a Happiness Fund for this purpose. It does more than just buy Christmas presents. It also provides gifts on birthdays and other important big days in the lives of young people. Through it the foster parents and case workers are able to plan, shop, and wrap presents as

This can be done as an individual or as a group. The important thing is to keep this Happiness Fund brimming full and assure smiles on the youngsters where smiles belong.

The fund was created by the Family Service and Aid Society, and you can contribute by mailing your money or a check to Happiness Fund, Box 628, Warren, Pennsylvania.

WHAT ONE HOUR CAN MEAN

When you are rushed for time, an unexpected gift of sixty minutes is manna . . . or when you are waiting for someone or something, sixty minutes can be eternity. An hour can hold much or little, mean something or nothing, depending upon the people and the circumstances involved.

In "One Hour", Lillian Smith's first novel since "Strange Fruit," she tells of the turmoil and torment in the lives of individuals and a community as a result of what did not happen in the space of "one hour." The one hour, the very brief space of time of which she writes, is the focal point of the story. But even as it stands starkly outlined in its sinister and evil implications, the edges tend to blur. Past happenings are blended and fused in this interval; at the same time, a chain reaction is set off which has unexpected repercussions for the future.

The narrator for this compelling story is David Landrum, the strong, dedicated, young rector of All Saints Church, located in a Southern city. The principal characters are members of his congregation, and what happens to them directly and indirectly happens to him. All become victims of that hour, but he perhaps suffers most, for, as their priest, he is forced to recognize the weaknesses and evil that lie behind the facade of goodness and respectability.

The one hour, from which all subsequent hours in the story stem, occurs almost at the beginning of the book. Susie Newell, an imaginative, lonely, deeply disturbed eight-year-old child, nourished on the neuroticisms of her mother, wanders into an empty store building late one afternoon. She plays there for awhile with an old yellow cat which inflicts a deep scratch on Susie's arm.

But the child, with suggestions from her mother, tells a story which involves a brilliant research scientist, Dr. Channing, whose life is completely centered in his talented wife, Grace, their son Andy, and his work at the laboratory, is accused of attempted assault. The devastating effect of the accusation is both immediate and far-reaching.

It moves like an epidemic through the community, infecting with hate, curiosity, fear and suspicion. Others are drawn into the whirlpool where are exposed the secret lives and hidden motivations of all those involved. The psychological unveilings lead to a revelation and deeper understanding of the complexities of human relationships. Even Father Landrum, in probing the motivations of others, experiences an unmasking of his own inner self, which he summarizes in these words, "There's evil in every one of us, evil and good feeding on each other . . ."

Intense excitement, physical and emotional, is projected from the very first pages and vividly sustained to the final sentence. The story simultaneously evokes emotional response from the reader as it provokes him to profound thought. One cannot help being stirred by the action itself and by the effect of the action on the various characters. At the same time, the reader is almost forced to follow the author in her quest for meaning and rationality.

The title refers to more than just the sixty minutes during which a small girl wandered into an empty store. Father Landrum, in his final words, summarizes it like this: "I said when I began that I wanted to find its meaning, its form. I see now that its meaning is still in the making, its form is still being shaped by the living: For the rest of us are still here and this experience lies, even now, only half formed in the hard rock of our awareness. I am not sure what will come next for we are still changing it: each time we feel one small movement of compassion or mercy or fear or hate, each time we glimpse a deeper level or turn away from the new vision, each time we find our courage or lose it, we are forming this hour . . . I am not sure what lies ahead; or where the next hour lies: except I know it is hidden somewhere in this one, among quiet and noisy and uncounted possibilities. And we, the living, will find it or fail to, as we continue to shape this small piece of time we call our own."

Read this book. We think you will enjoy it and be enriched by it.

CLASSROOM TV

Quietly but steadily educational television is becoming stronger, here in the United States and in other parts of the world. This season, "Continental Classroom" has more than a million viewers, many taking the course for college credit.

The University of North Carolina will offer a full college year over WUNC-TV starting this fall. High school graduates will be able to complete one year of college without establishing campus residence. It will take the student two years, including summers, to complete the year's study.

In September, 1960, the British Broadcasting Company plans to set up the first nationwide permanent TV service for schools. A budget of $560,000 will provide 80 hours of viewing per week. This will permit extension of the present program limited to secondary pupils, 11 to 15 years of age, to include the primaries, 5 to 10 years, and for sixth forms of grammar schools, the 16 and 17 year age group. Programs have included natural science, geography, drama, current events and mathematics.

Beginning January, 1960, commercial TV stations in eastern Tennessee and North and South Carolina will offer from four to six thirty-minute reading and writing lessons per week, especially designed for adults. A similar program will be established in Alabama. The purpose is to teach thousands of adults with little or no schooling. The lessons will be prepared by Dr. Frank Laubach, world-wide famous for his literacy work. The course will provide a high third-grade level of literacy, enough for one to pass a test for a driver's license, read and write simple letters, and make ordinary arithmetic calculations.

NEW PROGRAMS

A PUBLIC AFFAIRS program series is being planned by NBC to replace "Five Fingers" at 9:30-10:30 p.m. on Saturday nights, starting Jan. 16. The idea is in line with NBC's aim to improve programming in prime evening time. Frank McGee will be host and a typical sample of subjects to be covered are: Report of Cuba's First Year Under Castro; How the World Began; Alcoholism; Problems of the Baseball World; a visit to Los Angeles with Dave Brinkley.

ED SULLIVAN will take a trip around the world in March to search for talent for his special 90-minute spring program.

JOHN CROSBY may act as host for a program called "Criticism of the Arts" which CBS is considering. The show would be seen once a week, live, in prime evening time. Critics and commentators would discuss books, films, theatre, television, and such outlets of artistic and creative expression.

THE WORLD OF THE MIND will be an hour-long series which ABC has ready for Dec. 19. It will be seen once a month at 4 p.m. on Saturdays. The program originates at Yale University with Yale professors examining art, drama, philosophy, medicine, natural history, and other fields of study. "History HOSTESS FOR "WOMAN!" SHOW. Opera star Patrice Munsel will narrate "You Can't Raise Children by the Book" which will be the fourth program in the "WOMAN!" series of daytime broadcasts Wednesday, Dec. 16 (4:00-5:00 PM, EST) on the CBS Television Network and WBEN-TV. of Christmas In America" is slated for the first program.

NEW YORK CITY POLICE DEPARTMENT will be the core of a new drama series being considered by NBC. The proposed half-hour weekly series will be based on Quentin Reynolds' book "Headquarters", which glorified the skill, courage and devotion of the New York City Police Department.

TURNPIKE, a series about the adventures of state police on the New Jersey Turnpike, may be produced for ABC.

NEWSPAPER STORIES, dramatized in an anthology series, is the first program project of Ed Sullivan and the CBS' new producing company called Sylvan Productions. The series will deal with newspaper stories in which Sullivan has been associated as a reporter and columnist. Sullivan will serve as narrator.

FYI, meaning "For Your Information", is a new Sunday series scheduled to debut on CBS Jan. 3, at 11-11:30 a.m. To be considered are such subjects as obesity, polio vaccine, spread of culture to the suburbs, staggering cost to employers because of workers' thefts, etc.

DINNER ON CLOSED CIRCUIT

The Republican Party is staging a fund-raising dinner on Jan. 27 in seventy cities throughout the nation. President Eisenhower will attend the one in Los Angeles and speak from there to the other dinner parties via closed television circuit. The event is being proclaimed as the largest political campaign stunt ever.

WGR TALENT AUDITIONS

Singers, dancers and specialty performers will be auditioned Tuesday nights at 7 o'clock in the WGR-TV studios in Buffalo in preliminary screenings. Those who pass the first hurdle will appear again the following Saturday morning before another panel of judges. These winners will then appear that evening or on a subsequent Saturday evening at WGR's "Buffalo Showcase".

In addition to the television appearance winners will be considered for engagements at Buffalo's leading night club, Town Casino.

Anyone desiring detailed information may write to Program Coordinator, WGR-TV, 184 Barton St., Buffalo, N.Y.

ROSES FOR NIXON

Vice President Richard Nixon will act as grand marshal for the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day. The VP's wife and daughters will ride with him in the parade in a rose-covered car. NBC will televise the event Jan. 1 at 11:30 a.m. to 1:45 p.m.

NBC network will follow the parade with coverage of the Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans at 1:45 p.m. EST and this will be followed by the Rose Bowl Game at 4:45 p.m.

Sponsors Ruin Shows

By Marie Torre

The evils of sponsor control of television programming, much discussed these ill-starred days in TV, are delineated in the backstage exploits of a private eye named "Johnny Staccato."

On screen, "Staccato" vanquishes the blackguards all the time. But, off screen, he is rapidly demonstrating that he isn't equal to the forces of sponsorship. It's all Staccato's--or, more accurately, John Cassavete's blood that's spilling over, and as he dabs the wounds, he recounts a dirgeful tale.

Briefly stated, sponsor interference has approached the level of artistic agony.

"It is virtually impossible," says Cassavetes, "to get approval on a script that has substance, more so since the outbreak of the TV scandals. There is no limit on violence; you can get approval on a story in which a woman is slaughtered, but an honest story about a dope addict is rejected because 'it would be injurious to the sponsor's product.' In this case, the product is an under-arm deodorant. When you point up the folly of this kind of thinking, you're told, 'Well, with all this payola talk and the FCC giving television a close look, we could be thrown off the air with a story about dope.'"

The episode to which Cassavetes refers was scheduled to be shown two Thursdays ago. At the last minute, the qualms of the advertising agency representing the sponsor prevailed, and the show was yanked. The replacement was a program that had been reserved for Christmas Eve, meaning that "Staccato" scooped the industry by being the first to present a Yuletide show, some five weeks ahead of time.

"We looked pretty silly, I thought," remarked Cassavetes, "particularly since I had given out interviews about the 'dope' episode. I think it's one of our very best episodes. And I'm champing at the bit to do more like it. There are five or six fantastically good scripts on the shelf, off beat, substantial stories, but we can't get them approved."

"Strangely enough," he added, "if the sponsor people could read the scripts I'm talking about, I honestly feel they'd approve of them. It's their advertising agency that insists on playing it safe. Everything must conform to a bland pattern. Our stories shouldn't have a message, shouldn't offend anybody."

The "Staccato" show is produced by Revue Productions (a subsidiary of Music Corporation of America) which hasn't intervened in Cassavetes's behalf, though originally the actor was promised artistic freedom.

"The Revue people," said Cassavetes, "are fully aware that the situation is impossible, but they're not doing anything about it. Revue stocks are soaring, so why change things. I'm terribly disheartened. I'm tired of pap. I'm tired of hearing even my own crew say 'this is terrible.'"

"What can I do? Fight, I guess. Either I will make all parties so unhappy they'll release me from the contract, or they'll give in to me and let me put a little guts into the series."

The recent skirmish with Jack Paar on TV hasn't given Mickey Rooney a loss of appetite for TV. Rooney and son (Teddy) have agreed to appear in "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood" Jan. 10 . . . Alfred Hitchcock lends his genius to a pair of "Startime" productions this season based on Charlotte Armstrong mysteries--one titled "Incident," the other "Girl with a Secret" . . . Spectacular rise: NBC's specials this year will cost a total of $28,000,000, as compared with $20,000,000 in 1958 and $16,000,000 in 1957 . . . "Conquest" will explore the subject of hypnosis ("Science or Witchcraft?") on Dec. 13 . . . NBC's plan to replace "Five Fingers" Saturday nights at 9:30 with a series of public affairs shows is both admirable and perplexing--"admirable" that the network is putting so much into shows in the public interest; "perplexing" that it would schedule programs of serious import on the one night of the week when all Americans want to play.

DORIS FLEESON

Doris Fleeson is the only woman Washington correspondent whose work appears regularly in the great metropolitan dailies of the United States.

Five times a week Miss Fleeson writes a terse, crisp piece of interpretive news reporting about an important political development. It is distributed by United Feature Syndicate to a coast-to-coast clientele including The Washington Star, Boston Globe, New York Post, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Kansas City Star & Times, Los Angeles Examiner, Atlanta Journal, Minneapolis Star-Tribune and Oakland Tribune.

Her professional honors include the Raymond Clapper Award, Missouri Journalism Award, Theta Sigma Phi Headliner Award, New York Newspaperwomen's Club prize for Distinguished Reporting (twice).

Her own University, Kansas, has given her a distinguished alumni citation; she holds an honorary Doctor of Literature degree from Culver-Stockton College, and has been honored with a "Woman of Achievement" award by the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

Miss Fleeson usually writes from Washington and her specialty is domestic politics. This is no longer a narrow subject and Miss Fleeson has literally pursued the American national interest around the world.

Miss Fleeson was born in Sterling, Kansas, and educated in the Kansas public schools. Following her graduation from K. U. she went East and became a general reporter on The New York Daily News.

Assignment to the Seabury investigations into municipal corruption in New York city led her into politics. After tours at City Hall and the New York State legislature, she was sent to Washington in 1933 to help open a national news bureau for The News.

There she had a varied experience covering every facet of the New Deal, The White House, the Supreme Court, Congress, the national political campaigns and the pre-war struggle against isolationism. In 1943 she left The News and became a war correspondent for The Woman's Home Companion in the North African and European theatres. Following the war she returned to Washington and began her syndicated column.

Miss Fleeson formerly was married to New York Daily News' columnist John O'Donnell, and has a daughter, Miss Doris O'Donnell, a recent graduate of Vassar College. Miss O'Donnell worked for Edward Steichen on his photographic exhibit, The Family of Man, and is now with ABC-TV in New York.

The family home is an old Georgetown house with book-lined walls, English furniture and the usual brick-walled garden.

Miss Fleeson is a member and former President of The Women's National Press Club, a member of the 1925 F Street Club, of Chi Omega and Theta Sigma Phi. She is an Episcopalian.

Time Magazine in listing 13 Washington writers as the "Core of the Corps," said of Miss Fleeson:

"Her 'interpretive articles,' as she calls them, make informative reading, thanks to her well-used pipelines to Congressional offices. . . . She attends no off-the-record conferences, yet frequently knows what the Administration is up to before many of its brass hats."

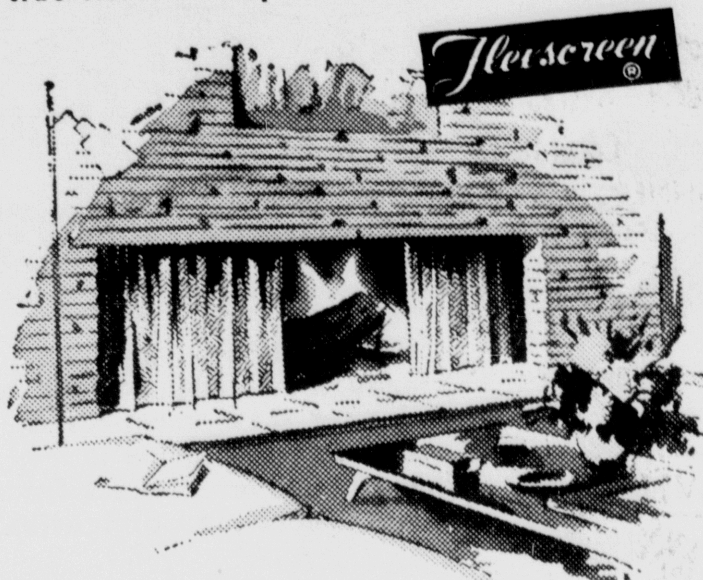

Her favorite comment about herself came from an editor who wrote:

"Doris Fleeson is a success because she learned the cardinal principles of reporting as a profession and has never tried to attract attention to herself by eccentricities."

She was also very happy when Eric Sevareid, CBS news analyst, told the American Booksellers convention last spring:

"Look carefully at the daily column written by Doris Fleeson. If you are, as a reader, intimate with the whole cargo of background she is writing against on any given day, you cannot fail to be impressed by the Swiss-watch economy of her construction. There is scarcely a wasted or replaceable word. She is probably the finest woman reporter of the time and in the field of pure party politics has no superior."

Others Say . . .

BIRTH CONTROL

Birth control and payola have combined to so fill the news columns and the thoughts of the American public that there is confusion in many minds as to just when President Eisenhower left, if he did, and where he is, if he is. When the President said public funds should not be used to provide birth control information for other nations he set a fire that outshone his own departure.

The subject really warmed up when a leading Jesuit moralist was quoted as saying that a Roman Catholic President could not in conscience approve a bill sponsoring a program of birth control.

The National Council of Churches, representing 39 million church members, then was heard from by way of the Rev. Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, president of the group. He said the decision of a Roman Catholic President should not be determined for him by the Catholic church. . . . it should be left to the individual conscience to make such a decision."

Dr. Dahlberg also said that his personal opinion was that nations should get their information through private agencies.

The New York Times reported that a sampling of non-Catholic views revealed that the consensus was that the President, in citing only the Roman Catholic doctrinal position on birth control, had ignored the teachings of the country's other major religions.

The Times quotes Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the nation-wide federation of Reform temples, as saying, in an apparent effort to avoid offense to any religious group, President Eisenhower has evaded one of the gravest problems of our time.

"I do not believe that one can examine the problem of mushrooming populations without frank consideration of the question of birth control. While I respect the position of the Roman Catholic Church and will vigorously defend their right to express the teachings of the church, I feel that no church has the right to impose its own dogma on the American people or on the foreign policy of this nation.

"To conduct a foreign policy in the light of this population explosion without making available necessary medical knowledge to the peoples of the world who desire it is to nullify all that we seek to do in our generous programs of foreign aid and technical assistance."

Rabbi I. Golovensky said he thought the country receiving the aid and not the United States government should determine whether this is a religious question.

Dean John C. Bennett, leading Protestant theologian, said that many Protestants regard responsible birth control to be a matter of conscience and not a concession to sin.

A Presbyterian writer claimed that President Eisenhower's thinking if logically followed would prevent the government from contributing armaments because Quakers are true conscientious objectors to war.

Said Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, chairman of the medical committee of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, "It appears that the President is inadequately briefed on this subject and that the administration has chosen to remain willfully ignorant of the facts of national and international population."

Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, United States vice president of the International Planned Parenthood Federation said the worldwide agency deeply regrets the President's statement. She says the federation of family-planning organizations in twenty-six nations is swamped with pleas for birth control, education, and supplies, and lacks the funds to meet them.

Dr. Guttmacher applauded the President's stand relative to not forcing population control on others, but he said no one had suggested such a thing. He said what had been proposed was that assistance be given only to those officially asking for it. He said some federal funds now are used for birth control programs in southern states where matching appropriations are used to support maternal and child welfare programs including birth control.

T.R.B. in The New Republic discusses the adverse effect of the Bishops' stand on the candidacy of Kennedy. Kennedy has taken a forthright stand for separation of Church and State. He has strongly backed federal education bills that lacked any aid for parochial schools. He has opposed an ambassador to the Vatican, persecution of Protestants in Spain, claims of church dogmas and papal utterances of any hold on the total behavior of an officeholder, says T.R.B.

The Republic's columnist writes that Kennedy has said that the test is not what the church claims but whether he admits it. He does not admit it.

"The fact is," writes T.R.B., "that the vast majority of Catholic officeholders do not act according to the exhortations of Church doctrine. But the Bishops won't retreat. And the controversy won't die."

LYONS WILL FACE THE ACADEMY LIONS TONIGHT

The Warren High Dragons, currently possessors of a one win and loss record, will match their wood capabilities this evening with the Erie Academy Lions on the city court. The Blue and White have been dumped by the Youngs-Eagles and the Erie Memorial tauras, bagged their first win of season last Tuesday over an in-riddled Northern Area team. The Academy team was stopped by Jamestown five on Tuesday evening by the score of 67-48. The Lions bring a two-two season's record to them when they face the Dragon net tonight. Warren's defenders will get a real test in the tie against the Lion duo of Chuck and Russ May. Redding, Hunt and Kremer have been managing to do some important ball-hawking on the boards so far and if they continue their efforts this evening locals may have an outside chance for an upset win over the visitors.

Coach Massa will again choose starting five from Lind, Barr, Kremer, Redding, Ostergard, Hunt and White. All these boys will undoubtedly see action in the contest, and will probably be the ones to carry the Warren load this season. In the JayVee scrap, which is slated to begin at 7 p. m., the freshmen-sophomore boys will face a group of Warren High hoopsters not participating on the school team. The freshmen who were added to the second team roster are Don and Doug Olson, Bill Crump, "PeeWee" Vala, and Jeff Brooks.

FORWARD WITH FITNESS

The annual Warren Junior and Senior high "Forward With Fitness" rhythmic and gymnastic exhibition will be held in Beaty gym on April 8 of next year.

MERCHANTS AND BEEMEN NOTCH BIG VICTORIES

The Sheffield Merchants and the Busy Bee Restaurant scored their second wins of the season in last evening's Y City League tussles. The Merchants dropped the Unknowns in the initial tilt by a decisive 90-74 count. The Beemen took their first engagement with last year's champs, Blueberry, by a 62-50 margin.

The Unknowns, sparked by Bud Rowland and Jeff Homan, kept the game with Sheffield on an even tilt in the first half by matching baskets with the victors. The quarter score read 23-19 in Sheffield's favor and that same gap existed at halftime as both squads meshed 20 points in the second period.

Sheffield broke out of their scoring cocoon in the third stanza with Don Labesky and Jerry Sadler doing the bulk of the pointmaking. Sheffield garnered 23 points in that frame to the Unknowns 11. In the final quarter the Unknowns again displayed some fine basketball talent as they managed to burn the cords with 24 markers.

Rowland, in his Y League debut, copped the evening's scoring honors with 31 for the Unknowns, Homan hitting 23 to aid him. Sadler with 25 and Labesky with 23 paced the Merchants.

In a very tight defensive battle the Busy Bee quintet scored an impressive win over the Blueberry Hill Inn. The game was a rough and tumble affair at times but both teams retained their composure to put on a good basketball exhibition for the fans. Busy Bee outscored their opponents in every quarter but the gap was narrowed in the third period by the desperate Innmen. Going in to that period Busy Bee held a nine-point bulge but saw it dwindle to three points before they snapped out of their scoring lull and began to scorch the chords once more.

Ben Obinger was high man in the game for the Blueberry aggregation as he collected 20 tallies. Schenk chipped in with eleven. For the winning Bee combination Ed Lindberg was high with 16. Dick Koebley and Barry Drexler each amassed 12.

Next Monday the undefeateds clash as Busy Bee and Sheffield meet at 7 p. m. The second game of the night will pit winless Blueberry and the Unknowns against each other.

PISTONS VICTORIOUS

The Pistons edged the Celtics, 35-34, in last Wednesday's battle in the Y Junior loop. According to league director Bob Hammerbeck, "the game was terrific and a real well played contest".

Johnson was high for the Pistons with 14, while Chase was aiding with 10.

Seymour and Porter were the big men for the Celtics with 16 and 8.

MATMEN WIN, 35-25

The Warren high matmen, coached by Hal Miller, protected their win streak as they opened the season with a 35-25 victory over Corry on the Eagle mats last night. Victory came at a high price, however, as two of the Warren grapplers sustained injuries which dim the team's future.

Tony Ross was pinned in the 95-pound class; Ralph Bibeau lost a decision in the 103-pound division; in the 112-pound class Rich Cummings recorded a pin; Campbell pinned Stutzman of Corry in the 120-pound class but suffered a shoulder injury; Sleeman was forced to forfeit because of an eye injury in the 127-pound bracket.

Bob Long and Griswold fought to a draw in 133; Rog Colvin was decided in 138; in 145 brother John Colvin scored a first period pin; Ron Seder in 154 pinned his man in the third period; John Mead registered a first period pin; in the 180-pound class, Everett Haight was put to the mats for a pin; and Jim Wick put his opponent's shoulders to the mats for a pin.

The Warren Jayvees registered a 29-23 win as Guiley, MacIntosh, Brian, Wooster, and Wilson pinned, and Grinnen decided.

THAT ISN'T CRICKET. After the ball at all costs is the Dragons' John Barr as he piles over an unidentified Northern Area player in Tuesday night's contest. This fourth quarter action occurred while Warren was holding a commanding 52-22 lead over the Knights. The final in Warren's favor was 65-25.

Poetry For Children

Does poetry fill a need for children? Will youngsters choose poems as reading for enjoyment? The answer to these questions must be a vigorous yes. Mother Goose has been a best-seller for many generations, and shall continue as such. Youngsters who enjoy a feeling for words well-used can gain from poetry a certain satisfaction to be found in no other form of literature. Poetry can bring humor and gladness, sorrow and solemn reflection, fun and fancy and a feeling of carefree activity.

Poetry is important to young children. For instance, they use it in play, reciting their favorite nonsense verses remain in their memories throughout life -- and special little verses prized above all others, bring comfort in the hearing and later in the recalling and reciting. No less important and pleasurable is the ability of poetry to present new and fascinating ideas. For a child, such expression is very special for the ideas come through words, whereas so many ideas are revealed to the very young in things and in actions.

Of great value to all children is a sense of rhythm and measured time. "Every piece of poetry," says A. A. Milne "has a music of its own, which it is humming to itself as it goes along, and every line and every word in it has to keep time to this music." Only those who can "keep time to this music" are good readers of poetry; and a good reader of poetry, Carlyle says, is also a poet, only to a less degree than the writer himself. Such a reader can bring the music of really great poetry to a child even when much of the thought contained therein is still uncomprehended. Let the child read for himself what he can, easily and understandingly, but let the poetry read to him be just a little "over his head;" let him grow up to it, so to speak. Surely such a plan will lead children to cherish more and more the best poetry.

Unfortunately, many children, as they grow into their teens, may lose their appreciation for and delight in poetry. The problem area seems to be that during which the youngster begins to read poems for himself, whereas previously he has heard them. If reading is hard for the child, his entire attention is concentrated upon the act of reading, and his inner ear is not free to listen to the lilt and pleasing rhythm of what he is reading. Here is where parents may aid their children, by reading with them, and patiently guiding their thoughts to the full meaning of what they read. If the book is appealing and has good illustrations, the young reader will be further attracted to the poetry as a written form.

The method of presentation may present a difficulty. The first requirement in bringing poetry to children is that teachers and parents should consult their own taste; otherwise their indifference will create a similar feeling in the young listener; for, remembering that the appeal of poetry is primarily to the ear -- not to the eye -- one should read much of it aloud to children. It is also a great advantage if the adults who wish to instill in their hearers a love for poetry are themselves good readers; and "a good reader" is one who is able to read intelligently and sympathetically without losing the rhythm.

Once a child can read poetry in a way which makes it sing to him once more, he may likely enjoy poetry alone. For by this time he may be emotionally impressed by the lines, and he needs to experience such important matters as emotions in private for a time.

The world of children and poetry is a vast, and intimate, and marvelous place. As adults, we often fail to understand and appreciate its importance for children of all ages, simply because we are adults and do not remember. Or perhaps we were not fortunate enough to fully appreciate poetry when we were children. Annis Duff gives to us a priceless insight into the child's world of poetry in her book "Longer Flight" (Viking Press, 1955) For a family who seeks to help their children grow and develop to their fullest potential this book provides a delightful guide. It is strongly recommended.

Some excellent anthologies, all available at the Warren Public Library:

De la Mare, Come Hither; De la Mare, Rhymes and Verses; Olcott, Story-telling poems; Untermeyer, Rainbow in the Sky; Untermeyer, Stars to Steer By; Untermeyer, This Singing World.

Pre-school children are always well satisfied with Mother Goose, and with nursery rhymes. A beautiful volume, to be treasured by any family seeking to build a basic collection as their children grow, is Marguerite deAngeli's book of MOTHER GOOSE AND NURSERY RHYMES. For slightly older children is Wilma McFarland's FOR A CHILD, an anthology compiled especially for small children. Both of these volumes are endowed with lovely illustrations.

Among the poets, those of special value for children are Dorothy Aldis, William Blake, Leslie Brooke, Lewis Carroll Elizabeth Coatsworth, Walter de la Mare, Eleanor Farjeon, Eugene Field, Rachel Field, Rose Fyleman, A. A. Milne, Laura Richards, James Whitcomb Riley, Christina Rossetti, Carl Sandburg, William Shakespeare, and Robert Louis Stevenson.
